I hold a degree in Information Technology and began my career as a computer technician. Over time, I became interested in designing WordPress sites, which sparked my passion for front-end web development. I have been teaching myself web design through online resources like YouTube, Udemy, w3schools, and MDN, and I have completed several web design training courses.

As a result, I am now prepared to step into a junior web development role. My goal is to acquire more skills in a dynamic and challenging work environment and gain experience working on substantial real-world projects and applications.
